The Prez Sez

Have you noticed that as we get older, things seem to take longer to finish? It feels like time goes faster and we go slower. I've been aware of this as I try to finish my '34 pick-up project.

When I bought it last June, I had a good plan as to how I would build it; keep it nice and simple and use up as many of my spare parts as possible. How hard could that be? I would just replace the motor, rebuild the brakes, install a dropped axle and clean up the inside.

I thought it should take about three months. It should be ready for Goodguys in November. Ha, ha! No? Well, maybe Goodguys in March. No? I'm still working on it. Now at the end of April, it does run and drive; but I've only been around the block a couple of times. In our enthusiasm for a new project, we overlook the many details and small things that need to be done. (I refer you to Brian Brennan's article in Street Rodder a few months back.)

If you have built a car, you know what I'm talking about. But, isn't it a good feeling when you can drive down the road and have fun? So, keep up the good work and enjoy your ride whatever state of completion it may be in.
